

Professional Development Editor

Partnership: The Canadian Journal of Library and Information Practice and Research invites applications for the position of Professional Development Editor.

Reporting to the Editor-in-Chief, and working in a collegial atmosphere with a team of twelve other Partnership editors, this is a volunteer position on one of Canada's leading open access journals serving the library profession. The position provides excellent recognition and professional development opportunities. Benefits include complimentary registration at the annual OLA Super Conference. The initial term of appointment is two years (renewable).

The Professional Development section of Partnership features articles designed to share knowledge of new technologies, resources, emerging trends, and best practices in library and information management. The intent is to update, inform and educate readers. The section is not peer-reviewed, but submissions are subject to editorial review.

Duties

- Encourages and manages submissions to the Professional Development section.
- Receives and evaluates manuscripts for interest, relevance, and quality of writing.
- Develops and maintains contacts with authors and potential authors.
- Works with the Editor-in-Chief, copyeditors and layout editors to facilitate publication of Professional Development articles.

Qualifications

- Awareness of emerging trends in library and information practice.
- Interest in promoting the continuing education of librarians.
- Previous editorial experience and/or experience working with the OJS journal publishing system would be an asset.

Background

The business of running the journal is conducted primarily by email with occasional teleconferences and one face-to-face meeting per year. The time commitment for the Viewpoints Editor will vary from issue to issue, with peak activity occurring in April and October following submission deadlines. The workload would probably not exceed 10-12 days per year.

Application and Selection Procedure

Deadline for applications is December 15, 2012.

Letters of application stating interest and qualifications, along with a current CV, should be sent to:

David Fox, Editor-in-Chief

Partnership: the Canadian Journal of Library and Information Practice and Research

Email: david.fox@usask.ca

Applications will be reviewed by a committee consisting of the Editor-in-Chief and members of The Partnership Board and the Partnership editorial team.

About Partnership:

Partnership: The Canadian Journal of Library and Information Practice and Research (<http://www.partnershipjournal.ca/>) is a leading open access journal serving the information and scholarly interests of the entire Canadian library community. The journal has published two issues per year since 2006.

The journal is published by The Partnership: Provincial and Territorial Library Associations of Canada. It is sponsored by the University of Guelph Library and the University Library, University of Saskatchewan. Partnership is a blended publication featuring formal, double-blind peer-reviewed sections on Theory and Research, and Innovations in Practice; a Conference Spotlight section subject to arm's length peer-review; plus several sections under editorial review: Professional Development, Reviews, Profiles, Viewpoints, and News and Announcements.

Partnership is hosted by the University of Guelph Library on the OJS platform.
